Jody Barone has studied Manifestation for several years. Her studies began with Earl Nightingale, author of The Strangest Secret, Napoleon Hill, author of Think and Grow Rich and Dr. Wayne Dyer six years ago. Andrew Carnegie commissioned Napoleon Hill in 1908 to share his legacy to the American people. Napoleon met and interviewed more than 500 people before finally writing Think and Grow Rich more than 25 years later, and became instrumental in the development of "The New Deal" which led our country out of the Great Depression. Jody will share her personal understanding of manifestation and include what she has found to be absent from the movie, "The Secret." According to Jody, her passion is to help people identify and manifest their dreams.

Manifestation includes identifying our desires, making our intention, focusing our attention on our desires and hardening our will. It incorporates high self-worth, surrender (detachment) and the belief structure we once all knew as children.

Jody says her study of manifestation has fit "hand in glove" with the landscape architecture and planning process that she studied at Syracuse and which she utilizes to help her clients fine-tune and manifest their visions. Her study of manifestation has made the planning process easier, but does not mean it's without a lot of hard work and study!

Her degrees include a BS (Environmental Studies/Landscape Architecture) and a MLA (Master in Landscape Architecture) with an emphasis in community planning - both from the College of Environmental Science & Forestry in Syracuse.
